IN NEED OF INSTANT RELIEF.

NORTH CAROLINIANS IN GALVESTON

Professor Ransom and Family Homeless, Clotheless and Penniless—He Writes Dr. McIver a Pitiful Letter Appealing for Help—The Only North Carolina Family That Lost Everything—Contributions May Be Forwarded Through The Telegram.

Among the sufferers by the Galveston flood were Prof. H. H. Ransom, and family, formerly of North Carolina. This, by the way, was the only North Carolina family in Gaveston that lost everything. Information of their deplorable condition comes through a letter from Prof. Ransom to Dr. Charles D. McIver.

The letter is full of pathos and sadness. Prof. Ransom writes that, while he was caring for some women and children, he was caught up by the flood and almost drowned. He was rescued after drifting on a piece of timber and being driven by the wind and waves for five hours. When the waters subsided he rejoined his family to find that, while their lives had been spared, they were homeless, clotheless and penniless. They are now in the most destitute circumstances and in need of instant relief.

In the course of his letter Prof. Ransom says; "Ours is the only North Carolina family that lost everything, I know your bigness of heart and sympathy and beg you to try to do something for us. Could you get some pecuniary help for us? I have given every cent of money I had left to some of my pupils' families. I find that 469 of my pupils are dead. My back and legs are injured, but I thank our Father that I am alive."

Prof. Ransom is a well known educator and is principal of the Ball High School, of Galveston. He is a native North Carolinian, being a son of the late Gen. Robert Ransom. He graduated at the University of North Carolina a number of years ago.

The condition of this man and his family should appeal with special force to our people. Their need is great and any assistance rendered will be greatly appreciated. Any contributions that may be made will be acknowledged and forwarded through The Telegram.

Unless otherwise ordered, all contributions hereafter received by The Telegram for the Galveston sufferers will be forwarded to this family.

A Drunken Negro Beats His Sweetheart.

John Gorrell, a sporty young negro, filled up on mean whiskey yesterday morning and went down into Duphin to pay a Sabbath call on his best girl. A misunderstanding arose between the couple over some matter, and to emphasize his remarks, John struck his sweetheart a severe blow over the head, following it with others. The affair developed into a general fight, which was broken up only by the arrival of Chief Scott and Policeman Merritt.

The defendant was lodged in jail and and will be allowed to give an account of his actions in the Police Court.

A GIGANTIC SCHEME.

A New Process for Making Cider at a Small Outlay of Cash.

A gentleman on the Southside is thinking of engaging in the cider business if the liquid now being supplied by the city waterworks retains its present coloring. His idea is to fill a number of barrels with the stuff, add a reasonable amount of acid and sell it for cider. He thinks there's a comfortable fortune in the business.

The scheme is equal, in point of perception, to one J. L. York's mineraline experiment, the only drawback in the present case being the gentleman's conscience.

ADDITIONAL PERSONALS.

Mrs. Pauline Arnold returned today from Mt. Airy White Sulphur Springs and is visiting the family of Mrs. Kate Pugh, on East McCulloch street.

Mr. W. S. Hyams, secretary of the Republican State Executive Committee, has gone to Marshall to attend the marriage of Miss Pritchard and Mr. Thomas S. Rollins.

Miss Annie Belle Monroe, who has been spending a few days at the home of Rev. B. L. Beall, on her return from a visit to Fayetteville, left this morning for her home in Lenoir.

Mr. W. B Stewart has returned from the annual meeting of the National Association of Letter Carriers in Detroit, Mich, to which he was a delegate. While awyay he visited Niagra Falls, Toronto and other points of interest.

Mrs. W. R. Hayward, of Charlotte, is visiting Mrs. J. J. Stone, on West Sycamore street. Her husband, Prof. Hayward, was until recently secretary and treasurer of Elizabeth College, but is now a member of the faculty of a Philadelphia business college.

Mr. Kerr's Palm of Christia Bean.

There is growing in the rear of Mr. S. A. Kerr's book store one of the finest specimens of the Palm of Christia bean one often sees. The stalk, which is fully 12 feet high, is very luxuriant. The leaves are large and beautiful. Mr. Kerr says the specimen is the largest he has ever seen.

AN INCREASED ATTENDANCE.

GROWTH OF THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The First Week of the Present Term Shows an Increased Enrollment Over Even the First Month of Last Year—The Schools Have Grown from Year to Year Until They Rank With the Best—Improvements on Buildings.

The Greensboro public schools closed the first week of the fall term with a total enrollment, in four of the schools of 1,290. This is a considerable increase in attendance over even the first month of last year, and does not include the white school, No. 3, which will not open until Thursday of this week.

At the Lindsay Street school the enrollment last week was 502, which is an increase of 28 over the first month of last year. At the Asheboro Street school the increase for the corresponding period was 29, the enrollment for the week being 348. During the week the two colored schools, Nos. 1 and 2, enrolled 280 and 160, respectively, which is also an increase over last year.

The growth of the public schools of this city is no less remarkable than it is gratifying. Year by year they have increased in numbers and efficiency, until today the Greensboro public schools rank with those of any other city of correspoding size. Under the wisest management, and with a teaching force of special adaptability to the work, it is but natural to suppose that the schools will continue to grow.

The improvements now being made on the high school building and on one of the colored school buildings, made necessary by the increased patronage, will add greatly to the comfort and accommodation of the pupils.

ORIGIN OF THE POPULISTS.

A Greensboro Man Finds the First Reference to This Class in Holy Writ.

In conversation this morning a gentleman of infinite jest and most excellent fancy remarked that the first intimation ever heard of the Populist party was to be found in I Samuel, 22:2, "And every one that was in distress, and every one that was in debt, and every one that was discontented, gathered themselves unto him; and he became a captain over them; and there were with him about four thousand men." The gentleman added that they had increased in number since that time.

The Day is Past When a Child Should be Allowed to Grow Up in Ignorance.

Winston Journal.

The Journal commends the efforts of The Telegram to ascertian the opinion of the leading men of our State in reference to compulsory school attendance. We endorse it thoroughly. The day is past when a child should be permitted to grow in ignorance, even if it desired to and its parents were willing that it should.

He Didn't Know.

Magistrate Peter Hughes, who loves a good joke, tells of a recent personal experience with great glee. In a certain case the other day a big colored woman was a witness. She testified that she had whipped her little boy very severely, and as she went on with the story of the exceedingly stiff beating she had administered the judge's clear brow grew a little darker, and he interrupted her to ask if it had been necessary to chastise the boy so severely. The witness opened her eyes widely at the question. Gazing intently at the court, she inquired: "Jedge, wuz you eber de father of a wuthless mulatter boy?" "No, no," responded Magistrate Hughes, hastily. "Then, jedge, you don't know nuffin' about de case."—Philadelphia Record.

Their Substitute.

"How do you suppose Adam and Eve reckoned the time without clock or calendar?"

"I don't know; but they had a date tree, didn't they?"—Town Topics.

Mr. Spencer Blackburn, Republican candidate for Congress, declines to accept the challenge issued by Mr. Buxton, Democratic nominee, for a joint canvass of the district.

Public school No. 3, at the Normal College, will will open Thursday, September 20, at 9 o'clock. All new pupils will please report at the building on Wednesday morning, at 9:30. when they will be examined and graded.

THE STRIKE NOT EFFECTIVE.

Only Two Districts Show a Complete Lock Up, But Others May Follow.

By Wire to The Telegram.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 17.—When the whistles blew at the collieries of the Wyoming Valley this morning, hardly a man reported for work. Not a mine is in operation in this great district. Sheriff Harvey, of Hazelton, says he anticipates no disorder, and claims that he is prepared for every emergency.

A careful estimate, covering the entire anthracite regions, places the mine workers at work today as 61 per cent of the whole. The strike was effectual only in Lackawanna, and the largest producers are still conducting operations.

EIGHT THOUSAND MORTALITY.

This is What the State Health Officer Will Report to the Governor.

By Wire to The Telegram.

Galveston, Sept. 17.—The danger of drought has passed. Some of the streets are lighted at night and many of the streets are cleared of wreckage. Telegraphic communication with the outside world is established Railroad officials believe they will be able to establish railroad communication Thursday. The track from Santa Fe was completed to Virginia Point last night. The state health officer left here yesterday to make a report to the governor at Austin, and he will estimate the mortality at eight thousand.

READY TO OPEN NEGOTIATIONS.

Ching Says He is Ready and Wants Minister Conger to Get Ready.

By Wire to The Telegram.

Washington, Sept. 17.—The Chinese minister today received a dispatch from Prince Ching dated Pekin, Sept. 8th, saying that he had been clothed with full authority, together with Li Hung Chang, to negotiate peace, and requesting Minister Wu to ask the Secretary of State to instruct Minister Conger to open negotiations at once.

To Give Uncle Paul the Marble Heart.

Rome, Sept. 17.—If President Kruger comes to Europe on the German steamship Herzag, calling at Messina or Naples, the authorities have been instructed to treat him as a private personage No notice is to be taken of his arrival and he is to be entirely unmolested.

Mr. Hardin Robbed.

Mr. J. E. Hardin, bookkeeper at the Revolution Cotton Mills, has had his gold watch and chain, a razor and a gold medal stolen from him. Mr. Hardin boards at Mr. John W. Stafford's, and the articles were taken from his room by a young negro who had just been employed to look after the rooms and do other odd jobs around the house.

So far the police officers have been unable to locate the thief, who is believed to have left town.

Prof. Wyche's Third Season.

Prof. R. T. Wyche, the story teller, will this week start upon his round of engagements for the third season, visiting schools and colleges and telling classic and literary stories from great masterpieces. This is a new line of work, for which Prof. Wyche is peculiarly fitted, and in which he has been quite successful.

Preparing for the Campaign.

Preparations are being made at Republican headquarters in this city for the opening of the campaign. The electors and other speakers will go on the stump within a few days. The nominees for Congress are now making speeches.

At present there are only two clerks at headquarters, but the force will shortly be increased.

No Scarcity of Water Now.

Since the rain there is no scarcity of water, though it is too muddy for any domestic use. It will become clearer after having time to settle in the reservoir and pond, provided the supply is not again exhausted. It is doubtful if the water will be suitable for use for some time to come.

TRIAL BY THE TEST OF FIRE.

SHALL OUR WORKS GO UP IN SMOKE?

Jesus Christ is Salvation, and for Good Works We Shall Receive a Reward—Heaven is Where Christ is and it Matters Not Whom We Shall See There—Mr. Martin's Sermons.

Rev. T. T. Martin, the evangelist, who is to conduct a series of meetings in West Washington Street church, preached his first sermons yesterday morning and evening. Both sermons were on the subject of "Heaven."

Heaven, he said, is a place—Christ went to prepare a PLACE. Some people say that heaven is a condition. This is an absurdity. Shall we know each other? This makes no difference. What should concern us is that Christ will be there and we shall be with Him. As there are degrees in hell, so are there degrees in heaven. How can an intelligent person read the Bible and believe otherwise? Salvation is the acceptance of Christ. If that acceptance occurs in one minute, it is salvation; if it occurs in ten years, it is salvation. A 14-year-old girl without salvation dies, and—without mincing matters—she goes to hell A hardened old sinner who has for 50 or 60 years served the devil and pulled down all the souls he could, dies, and everybody says he goes to hell. Certainly that girl does not occupy the same place in hell which that crusty old sinner does.

I Corinthians 1. 11-15: "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ.

"Now if any man build upon this foundation gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble:

"Every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is.

"If any man's work abide which he hath built thereupon, he shall receive a reward.

"If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss; but he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire."

No man is saved by his works, his church membership, or anything else. But these are a reward to him. Let the lives of six young men who are converted be represented by six houses. All the six are saved. Jesus Christ is their salvation. Let this salvation represent the foundation of all the houses—solid iron—the superstructure, the life work of the individuals. One's life is such that it may be represented as a house of gold. One not quite so good is a house of silver. The next still not so good is of costly stone. The next has some good works—a house of wood. The fifth is negative, no good works, a house of hay; and the last still worse—a weak structure of stubble. All are built on the same solid iron foundations. The test of fire is applied. The houses of gold, silver and stone remain, the work of the builders stand—they have their reward. The wooden house burns, too, but not so rapidly. The ones of hay and stubble go up in a flash—but the foundations of all remain. All are saved, but only the three whose works stand receive a reward.

Mr. Martin announced that there would be no exhortations to people to come to the altar, to stand up, to raise their hands, or otherwise do things that they are usually asked to do in protracted meetings. An invitation would be made for those who found salvation to make it known—nothing more. Large congregations attended both services.

Services will be held daily at 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

Mr. McKenzie's Family to Reside in Greensboro.

Mr. E. B. McKenzie and family, of Salisbury, will reside in Greensboro in the near future. They arrived Saturday night, Mr. McKenzie going on to Richmond on business. He has recently accepted a position with the American Tobacco Company and will travel the state of Virginia.

In speaking of their removal from Salisbury, the Truth-Index says: "Salisbury will regret to lose Mr. and Mrs. McKenzie, both of whom have been prominent in the social world."

RALEIGH CHURCH DEDICATED.

ARRAY OF PRESBYTERIAN CLERGY

Dr. McIver in Raleigh and Talks of Female Education—22,000 More Educated Women Than Men in the State—Methodist Orphanage to Open January 1.

Special Correspondence of The Telegram.

Raleigh, Sept. 17.—The weather bureau hit it off well enough in its prediction of rain, but failed utterly as to the cool wave, the latter obstinately refusing to materialize.

The local event here yesterday was the dedication of the First Presbyterian church, in the morning. At least 1,000 people were present. There was quite an array of prominent Presbyterian clergymen. Rev. Dr. William McPheeters, of Columbia, prayed, he being the grandson of the founder of the church, who was also Raleigh's first pastor. The sermon was by Rev. Dr. Walter W. Moore, of the Union Theological Seminary at Richmond. Dr. Moore by the way first suggested to Rev. Dr. Eugene Daniel, the pastor, the building of the new church, and to this fact Dr. Daniel made special allusion. Much money was contributed today to pay off the $3,000 debt upon the church. There were five subscriptions of $100 each and a number of $50 ones.

The walls of Raleigh's new knitting mill, the Melrose, are nearly finished.

This week and next week, with favorable weather, the bulk of the cotton crop will be picked.

The penitentiary officials, finding that the State Treasurer was and is unable to pay them the $35,000 on this year's appropriation, which they wanted, say they would like to have $5,000, which is needed to pay for a plant for preparing peanuts for market. The penitentiary has now a complete electric lighting system, which it is said was installed at a cost of only $15,000.

Joe Martin, who was nominated by the Republicans in the twentieth district for Congress, is a fat little man, always jolly, and is postmaster at Tarboro. A Republican, Dr. Abbott, says the nomination is a result of the manipulation of George White, the negro Congressman. White wasn't on hand at the convention, but his influence was felt. White doesn't have very much business in North Carolina these days. He doesn't like to ride in Jim Crow cars.

The orchestra concerts at the park these Sunday afternoons are delightful and are well patronized. They do not pretend to be sacred concerts.

A visit to the new public school here, the Wiley, leads to the belief that it will not be ready for use in three weeks, while it ought to be ready by September 28, the date the public schools are to open.

Nothing in this State either public or private, approaches in beauty of design, decoration etc., the reading room and the lecture, concert and amateur theatrical hall of the Raney library. This building will be one of the show places of Raleigh. It is certainly a noble gift, the most unique in this State.

Sidney Cooper, of Henderson, was elected chief marshal of the State fair, but was forced to decline as he is to marry a daughter of Howell Jackson, of Atlanta. Mr. W. T. Old, of Atlanta, is made chief marshal.

Dr. Delia Dixon, physician at the Baptist Female Uuiversity, here and one of the most talented young women in the State, is soon to be married to Dr. Norwood Carroll, a well known young dentist here, and son of United States Marshal O. J. Carroll.

January 1 the doors of the Methodist Orphanage here will be opened to pupils and 50 will be given quarters. By that date two cottages will be ready. There will be a group of cottages. The Odd Fellows here have made contributions to this orphanage and also to the Roman Catholic Orphanage here.

The State Board of Public School Examiners issued life certificates to the following teachers: A. E. Woltz, Dobson: Davis, Mendenhall, Kimesville; Allen Gentry, Elkin; O. F. Thompson, Caudle; A. C. Tate, Marshall.

Your correspondent, in the course of a conversation with Dr. Charles D. McIver, the progressive president of the State Normal and Industrial College, learned that in North Carolina the women are not given a fair show in educational matters, for there are 22,000 more uneducated white women than white men in the State. Place aux dames! one feels like crying out, on hearing such news as this. More dormitory room is greatly needed at the State Normal and Industrial College. Speed the time when it will have a thousand students.

YOUNG WOMAN EXPLAINS MYSTERY.

Comes to a Hospital With a Bullet Hole in Her Breast and Says Young Barbour Shot Both Her and Himself.

New York, Sept. 15.—The mystery surrounding the suicide of Henry Grosvenor Barbour, son of the Rev. Henry M. Barbour, rector of the Church of the Beloved Disciple, this city, has been cleared up.

Young Barbour shot himself Thursday evening at a Brooklyn hotel, his body being found Friday morning. He had come to the place with a young woman who was described as being beautiful to a degree. She disappeared and the events leading up the affair might have remained hidden had she not been found today in Henry Hospital, Brooklyn, with a bullet in her breast. This wound, she says, was inflicted by Barbour.

The young woman in the case is Miss Helen Southgate Forbes, 19 years of age. When a child she was adopted by Bishop Horatio Southgate, a distinguished Episcopal missionary. According to her story young Barbour was drinking and proposed a double suicide, she accepting the proposal. Barbour shot her in the right breast. She says he then killed himself by sending a bullet into his mouth. She was only wounded and quickly left the room and hurried to the hospital. The physicians there are in doubt as to her recovery.

Thicker Than Water.

Chicago Tribune.

"If it wasn't that I've got to watch my cooking," shrilly exclaimed the red-faced woman on the east side of the back-yard fence, shaking a large wooden spoon at the equally excited woman on the west side of the fence, "I'd give you a good, big piece of my mind!"

"Cooking!" contemptuously responded the other. "What have you got in your house to cook?"

"I'm making currant jelly!" screamed she of the red face

"Are you? So am I! Run in the house and bring out a spoonful. I want to see if it jells as well as mine does.

A minute later they were comparing notes in the most amicable manner over the same back yard fence.

A. D. Prestelle, a colored centenarian, was found dead in Wilmington Friday, under circumstarces indicating that he had been brutally murdered. Part of an ear and one finger were cut off, and there were deep gashes on his head and face. Twenty-five feet away was found, partly concealed by weeds, a hoe, which the old man had taken with him Thursday afternoon when he started to dig bait for a fishing trip. He is the third old man who has been murdered there in the past sixteen months.

FORTUNE TELLING.

When on the grain was summer's gold,
And blue was summer's sky,
We went to have our fortunes told,
A witching maid and I.
The Gypsy sibyl seemed uncouth
And weird to look upon,
And yet for each of us, in sooth,
A merry tale she spun.

Mine was a kindly horoscope;
I heard my birth above
Had hung the happy star of hope,
The lambent star of love.
The star of love that bringeth bliss,
I learned, still shed its glow.
Much more the sibyl said, but this
Was all I cared to know.

Then into Sylvia's slender hand
I saw the Gypsy peer,
And words I longed to understand
Were whispered in her ear;
While on her cheek a blush had birth
That spread in rosy fire,
As when the winter-wakened earth
Feels spring's divine desire.

We left behind the Gypsy old,
And 'neath a dusky pine
Again was that fair story told
That ended: "Sweet, be mine!"
Then Sylvia, the roguish-eyed,
Laughed in her winning way;
"'That's what," triumphantly she cried,
"The Gypsy said you'd say!"

THE THEATER HAT.

"WHAT have you got to do this evening?" said Cmythe.

"Nothing whatever," I replied.

"Well," said he, "I have a couple of seats for the California. Don't you want to come?"

"I should be delighted, my dear boy."

And in a few minutes we were in a cab, rolling toward the theater.

Scarcely had we settled ourselves in our seats when I saw, entering the row in front of us, a tall, thin blond, who seated herself in the chair immediately in front of mine. And then I saw with stupefaction that she wore upon her head a curious sort of hat cocked down in front and cocked up behind, garnished with flowers, with vegetables, with shrubs—in fact, a veritable garden. As she had cocked her cocked hat over her eyes, it resulted that the rear of this vegetable garden towered above the top of her blond chignon, so that I could see no more of the stage than if I had been in far Cathay.

The bell rang; the curtain rose; I heard voices—presumably of actors—but it was impossible for me to tell. At the risk of acquiring a telescopic neck, I leaned to the right, then to the left. But I had not counted on the balloon sleeves of the blond, which were perfect monsters of swollen silk, and which masked completely both wings of the stage as her hat did the middle.

"Holy smoke!" said I to my friend. "that hat is going to be rather a nuisance."

The blond lady heard me; she turned slightly, put up her lorgnon, and surveyed me with the utmost haughtiness. Then, shrugging her shoulders, she pulled up her sleeves, so that it was impossible for me to see even the proscenium arch. Then she braced up her feet against the chair in front, and hoisted herself up a few inches, so that by this gymnastic feat she succeeded in elevating her vegetable garden even more than before.

In a melancholy tone I said to Cmythe: "It seems to me I would have been better off if I had stayed at the club and toasted my toes in the cafe in front of the fire. I would not have been incommoded or discommoded, and I would have seen fully as much of this piece as I am seeing now."

Hearing this, the blond lady turned around once more, and favored me with the most sneering smile that I have ever seen. It provoked me, and I determined to give her a lesson if I could. For I might as well have been in a theatrophone listening at a telephone. I could hear, but I could see nothing. Voices—female voices, male voices—confusedly came to my ear. You know how perplexing it is when you cannot see the personages upon the stage, when you cannot note their gestures nor the play of their faces. But the first act terminated in the midst of roars of applause. A man I knew, three seats to my right, was shaking with laughter. Everybody in the theater seemed to be intensely amused at the play except myself. And the blond lady would still turn from time to time, and favor me again with her sneering smile.

Seated immediately in front of the blond lady was a very little man who looked like a hunchback, his head was so sunken between his shoulders. I looked at him carefully. He had the appearance of being a dead-head, owing to his rather shabby attire. I tapped him on the shoulder, and asked him if he would go out with me between the acts for a few minutes. When we were outside, I said to him:

"My dear sir, I have a particular interest in occupying your chair, No. 48. If you will pardon the liberty I take, I would like to give you this trifle"

(I slipped a five-dollar piece into his hand), "and, in exchange, I would like to have your seat and you may have mine, No. 92."

The little man's face lighted up with pleasure. He slipped my five-dollar piece into his waistcoat pocket, and said: "Certainly, my dear sir. You are very good. I will take your seat with pleasure."

Thus was I placed in possession of seat 48. Now I could see the stage, but still I was not revenged. My first idea was to install myself there, wearing my own high hat, but I reflected that this manifestation might not be understood, would seem discourteous to the actors, and that I would be forced to take it off. Suddenly an idea flashed across my mind—an inspiration. I left the theater and walked a block or two until I came to a milliner's shop. I entered and demanded of the saleswoman to sell me a hat—the most gigantic, the most arboriferous, the most pyramidal hat she had. She opened a drawer and exhibited to me a monument in black felt, with an enormous knob of black velvet upon its top, and on top of the black felt knob a puff of black flowers, extremely high. Without haggling, I paid her the price, and swiftly returned to the theater.

To the stupefaction of Cmythe, who was still seated in his chair, No. 90, I seated myself in No. 48, immediately before the blonde lady with the big hat, and then, with a perfectly serious countenance, I placed upon my head the black velvet monument. I do not know what sort of a figure I cut with my long mustaches under the velvet hat, but if a bomb had burst in the orchestra it would not have produced a greater effect. Exclamations came from every direction, and people climbed up on their seats to see me, amid roars of laughter.

The men—poor wretches, they do stand together once in awhile—understood the motive of my protest, and cried: "Bravo! Bravo! He is right!" while the agitated Cmythe screamed to me across the blonde lady's balloon sleeves: "Why, old man, you are going crazy." None the less, I remained impassive in the midst of the tempest which I had let loose. But the usual reverse came. Two ushers, after consultation, came to me and politely begged me to take off my hat. "Certainly," said I, "if you will make this lady take off hers." This response provoked the utmost enthusiasm from the men. But the ushers would not listen to reason, and they made me leave my seat.

The lady with the vegetable garden triumphed, but not for long.

Looking up toward the family circle, I saw a colored damsel wearing a small turban. I mounted to the circle. I went to the colored lady. "Pardon me," said I, "but I have just purchased a hat which cost me $15 only a quarter of an hour ago." I exhibited the black velvet monument, and the colored lady's eyes bulged out in amazement and admiration.

"And what about it?" said she.

"Nothing but this: it is yours if you will do me the favor to occupy my seat in the orchestra, No. 48, until the play is over."

In a second she swept off the little turban which she wore, placed the black velvet monument upon her head, gave it two or three taps before the mirror in the lobby, shook out her skirts, and then, taking my arm, I conducted her to orchestra chair No. 48.

Oh, if you had only seen the convulsive joy among the men in the orchestra when they saw my monumental hat reappear upon a feminine head. This time the ushers had nothing to say. The lady with the vegetable garden was vanquished. She could see nothing during the rest of the piece, and served as a focus from opera glasses from all over the house.

Revenge! Revenge! At last I was revenged. Ha, ha!—San Francisco Argonaut.

MONDAY SEPT. 17, 1900.

THE BURDEN IS ON THE EDITORS.

The newspapers of our State should be keenly alive to this matter, they make it a matter of personal interest if they desire, for most assuredly it is a vital question with newspapers. We can only have subscribers among people who can read and the more people can read, the more subscribers a newspaper will have. As a rule, people of the West are better educated, and for this reason it is but little trouble to sustain a paper. But this is the selfish side of the question. If we only regard the individual interest who should be educated, we have all the incentive that we need to encourage every one to favor compulsory education.—Winston Journal.

Our contemporary is right that this is the selfish side of the question, yet in this, it truly says, the newspapers of the State have a sufficient incentive to take up this great cause and push it on to success.

The press rules this land. There is no shadow of doubt about that. We hear about the influence of this man or that man, but his influence consists in how much he can influence the press or some section of it. The power that the press exercises is not heralded with a blast of trumpets. It comes quietly, unnoticed, unthought of. But the silent forces are the powerful ones. The editorial responsibility is greater than that of any other calling, and the aggregate responsibility of the press of this country is greater than that of all the other professions combined. Whatever comes, comes through its influence.

Therefore, like the Journal, we want to see the papers of the State take up the matter of education as they have never done before. When they do we shall go forward, till they do we cannot hope to do so. The press can force an increase of funds and it can force compulsory attendance if this is deemed wise. Nobody else can. It is a matter of encouragement that the editors are beginning to give their attention on this subject. May we not hope that when the present campaign is over, the subject will be taken up in earnest by the brethren? The burden is on them.

In a speech last week Mr. Theodore Rosevelt said: "It is on the Fourth of July that we celebrate the victories of Bunker Hill, Yorktown, and Appomattox." Mr. Theodore has written books, even histories. How could he, and be guilty of such a statement as that, is a mystery. As an attempted statement of fact, it is false; in relevancy to the subjects of this campaign, it is far-fetched; in taste, it is execrable.

A MONDAY BOOK RAMBLE.

To persons who "keep up" with current fiction, the appearance of a new author is like the discovery of a new dish to an epicure; he is anxious to try the flavor; and after the first book has been read, if it is liked, the next is anxiously awaited.

A recent candidate attempting to recieve the approval of the public's literary appetite is Ralph Conner—which name, no doubt, is a pseudonym. His first book is "Black Rock." It is unconventional, that point alone making it interesting. But it is more than interesting, it is influencing. Black Rock is a mining town in the faraway north, among the pines of Canada. With the great variety of characters assembled there to work in the mines and lumber camps the book deal. There are some half a dozen who are more or less heroes, all clustering around the central one—a preacher. Not a preacher who delivers his message of hell fire and then finds consolation in the thought that the fellows who pay no attention to him will catch it sometime, but an earnest, great-hearted, self-crucifying man, who wants to help sane men from their sins because sin is vile. He is a religious bohemian, but one who was the salvation of the camp. The men were gathered from everywhere; broken and ruined men, voluntary or involuntary exiles, and hoping to pull themselves together and having returned to self-respect and respectability, to return to civilization and former ties. But the sins of the camp and the saloon beset them, sprung upon them at every turn, and consumed them. The preacher took count of their weaknesses, their human nature and broken characters, put his human nature and the Father's love right down among them and—saved them. Struggle and disappointment, shame and despair—but victory. One woman alone is in the story. She is enough. She is more than a heroine. She is a benediction. Humor and pathos abound, the description is fine. It is all delightful, because really fresh and new. Excitement and adventure are not wanting, and the book makes you FEEL which is the true test of its value But more than all—'tis true.

* * * *

There is nothing more fatal to one's admiration of an author than that one should find the same idea made to do service in the author's two books. Critics say, we believe, that in all the multiplicity of characters of the great Shakespere there is no suggestion of repetition. This is the falt displayed by Miss Johnson, the charming writer who has thrown the glamour of romance over the very early days of colonial Virginia in the production of two well written books—"Prisoners of Hope" and "To Have and To Hold." We believe the former appeared first; the latter is superior, and it were better, really, for the author had not the first appeared at all. Not that it is not an exceedingly interesting story, and well told, but that its principal idea is used in the last, and so much better, that it were better not introduced by the first. "To Have and To Hold" is artistically superior in every way, though laid in an earlier period. There are more suggestions of crudeness and immaturity in the former—hairbreadth escapes one of them—and the end is certainly bad. This is one of the points on which the second book was an improvement. She deals too hardly with her characters. In view of what we have in the altogether charming "To Have and To Hold," it were better did not the "Prisoners of Hope" exist.

* * * *

Captain Mahan, the world-recognized authority on sea power, produced his earlier books upon the subject while he was an active officer in the United States Navy. Speaking of the literary laborers of military and naval officers, the New York Sun says that Gen. Halleck's standard work on international law was the result of his studies while still an officer of the corps of Engineers; and Col. Winthrop's books on military law grew out of his duties as a Judge Advocate in the army. The last-named book, like Col. Davis' more recent book on international law, may be said to have developed naturally from the regular work of their authors; but there are many others that must have been done in the leisure time of the writers. Lieut. Dickman translated Von der Goltz's "Conduct of War" a year before Lord Wolseley's series of military handbooks contained a translation; and Lieut. Sargent's authoritative studies of some of Nopoleon's campaigns are the result of private labor. The list of military books put out by a Western publishing house shows the activity, in ways not strictly military, of many of our army officers; and the work of our naval officers is in no way behind.

* * * *

An unusually offensive book is "Paul of Tarsus," by Robert Bird (Charles Scribner's Sons). The attempt to fill up the gaps in our knowledge of Biblical events by the efforts of commonplace imagination and to recount them in cheaply sentimental language are distasteful to persons who live outside of religious circles and, we should imaging, would seem repulsive and blashemous to educated people within those circles. The narrative of Paul's personal life is made to fill over 500 closely printed pages of gush.—New York Sun.

THE JOGGLING BOARD.

A Plaything Which Affords Lots of Amusement to the Boys and Girls of the South.

Through the south, and particularly in Louisiana, the children have a plaything known as the "joggling board." One sees it under the big oak trees and pepper trees on the well-kept lawns about great houses, and on the hard-beaten earth in front of the negro cabins. It is a piece of plank an inch thick and 12 or 14 feet long. Poor children place it between rails in fence corners or between two stumps; the children of the rich have frames made like the legs of a chair with rounds. This is sunk in the ground and the board placed on the top rungs. Some children use ordinary carpenter's horses.

KEEPS THE CHILDREN QUIET.

The board is very springy and children will sit on it by the hour "joggling" away contentedly when nothing else will keep them quiet. A traveler through the south said he had not seen a swing or "teeter" in his whole journey, but that every child was provided with a more or less satisfactory "joggling board."

Girlie's Bright Little Joke.

Girlie the other day asked her big sister to give her an example. So her sister said, in fun: "Well, if one family has three children, how many children have two families?" "Nine," was the prompt reply. "Why, how's that?" queried her sister. "Oh," said she, roguishly, "the other family had six children!"—Youth's Companion.

A Juvenile Bargain Hunter.

A pretty little girl of three years was in a drug store with her mamma. Being attracted by something in the show case, she asked what it was. The clerk replied: "That is a scent bag." "How cheap!" replied the little girl. "I'll take two!"—Youth's Companion.

SLAIN IN BED.

A Brother of a Man Whose Wife was in Love With Henry G. Brown Goes to the Latter's Home at Midnight and Shoots Him.

Mr. Harry G. Brown, a well know journeyman painter, was shot and killed Saturday morning between 1 and 2 o'clock, at his home in Rock Hill, S. C., by a midnight intruder, says the Charlotte Observer. The facts in the case are as follows: After 1 o'clock in the morning two men drove up to Brown's gate and one of them, leaving the buggy, went in and knocked at the door. Mr. P. A. Neal, father of Brown's wife, responded to the knock and opened the door. He found on the porch a strange white man, who stated that he had gone there to see Brown about doing some painting at the Victoria Cotton Mill, at which he was employed, claiming that the importance of the work made a call at that hour of the night a necessity. Mr. Neal protested against arousing Brown, who was asleep. The stranger persisting, he went to the former's room and opened the door. To his great surprise the strange man had followed him in and rushed into Brown's room. Before he realized what was going on the intruder had shot Brown twice, one ball going through the left arm and the other into the liver. A dim light was burning in the room at the time and Mrs. Brown and infant child were occupying a bed not far from the one in which Brown lay. The murderder fled as soon as he had accomplished his purpose. Mr. Neal tried to hold him, but in vain. When the last shot was fired, Brown had not been thoroughly aroused from sleep.

Before Brown died he told a policeman that Paul Bratton was the man who shot him. Paul Bratton is a brother of Mr. John Bratton, of Yorkville. For some time it has been known among Brown's most intmate friends that he and Mrs John Bratton were in love with each other and that letters often passed between them. Brown's wife had begged him to stay away from Yorkville, but when slightly under the influence of whiskey he would go against her will. Last Thursday he paid Mrs. Bratton a visit at her home and while there was faced by Bratton and a fight ensued, in which Brown came out victorious.

Going back to Rock Hill from Yorkville Brown tried to persuade his wife to let him leave there at once. He expected trouble, but would not tell the reason why. Yesterday morning it came and with it his death.

Paul Bratton was arrested yesterday afternoon, and placed in York county jail. He declares that he is innocent.

Letters from Mrs. Bratton to Brown were full of invitations, asking him to see her. She seems to have been infatuated with him.

THE PARAMOUNT ISSUE.

Something Worthy Must be Done by the General Assembly for its Weakest Children.

Charity and Children.

We rejoice with exceeding great joy at the rising educational sentiment sweeping over our State. North Carolina is stirred as she has never been on the importance of increasing and bettering our educational facilities. Our academies and colleges are crowded with children and youth eager to learn. Praise the Lord for the prospects before the poor boys and girls. Education is, indeed, the paramount issue here. It is a matter for profound thanksgiving that popular education is really becoming popular. It is useless to shut our eyes to the fact that in North Carolina for the past fifty years the common schools have been shamefully discriminated against. Many prominent men held the heartless opinion that a laboring man did not need to be educated; that learning would raise himself, and lift him out of his proper and natural sphere. So deep-rooted and so general was this cruel sentiment that it required many years of agitation to break its power. We have often alluded to the rude awakening of members of the last Legislature when the bill making an extra appropriation was offered, and we have no doubt that members voted for that bill who at heart were bitterly opposed to it. But that great triumph crushed the opposition that for so many years blocked the way toward a better system of public schools. Now the bare footed children have plenty of friends. Something worthy must be done by the incoming General Assembly for the weak and helpless of our good commonwealth. Boys of ten years under must learn to read or be to take no part in the government of the State. We must be just and to the little girls as well, on to be buried in cotton hope our colleges will live per, but we are not cor- them. The State must weakest children.

AUNT MARTHA'S MISTAKE.

BY FRANK B. WELCH.

IN all things Aunt Martha was very exact and particular but in the affairs of her widowed brother's household, of which she was the presiding spirit, she was particularly precise, and especially in the supervision of the culinary department. The kind-hearted yet severe old soul kept after Matilda, the kitchen girl, with a relentless persistency and a hawk-eyed vigilance which often made the poor girl sigh for relief from her surveillance, for anything that was done amiss had to be carefully rehearsed under the direct supervision of her inspector-general. As a result the culinary skill of Aunt Martha came to be known and bragged of throughout her wide circle of friends and acquaintances; and when anybody wanted to speak in praise of anybody else's pies or puddings the invariable verdict was: "Most as good as Aunt Martha's."

One evening a small but select company of Aunt Martha's friends was invited to take dinner with her, in celebration of her brother's birthday anniversary, and she had given every detail of the cooking thereof her personal attention. The soup, meat, etc., had all received her approval before being placed before her guests, but when it came to the dessert, that she insisted upon preparing with her own hands. She made one of her famous cabinet puddings, as a treat for the occasion, and there was general rejoicing among her guests over the prospect of inserting their teeth in the much-vaunted dainty.

The pudding had been passed ere it dawned upon Aunt Martha that she had not made any sauce for it. Such an oversight would have been almost inexcusable on the part of anyone else, and the dear old soul was honest enough to declare that the error was even worse for its commission by herself. She was compelled to confess that in her haste she had overlooked that important item, but springing to her feet she exclaimed: "Wait a moment! I'll make sauce in a jiffy," and darting into the pantry she skirmished around for hardly more than a moment and reappeared with a look of triumph in her eyes and a bowl of translucent, palatable-looking sauce in her hands.

"There!" she said, as she proceeded to help each dish generously. "I guess we will have sauce if Aunt Martha is a little forgetful. I don't see, for the life of me, how I came to forget it; but law! I'm getting old and careless."

This candid acknowledgment brought a sly smile to the faces around the table, and to thoroughly convince their good hostess of their willingness to forgive her they all started in on the pudding with a vim that bespoke a previous knowledge of its qualities.

The first taste had a queer effect on the whole company. Some dropped their spoons and raised their napkins, some paused with perplexed faces, and others made a brave effort to go on with the pudding. Then Aunt Martha herself tasted, then she smelled, then glancing wildly about, she cried: "Land sakes! What is it? Do you find anything wrong with the pudding?"

There was no concealing the fact that they did, but no one had the courage to make reply. Their looks were enough, however, and without further inquiry Aunt Martha made a bolt for the pantry, from whence a moment later came the agonizing exclamation: "Forever more! if I haven't gone and put machine oil in the sauce instead of lemon extract!"

The variety and intensity of expressions on the faces around that table would have furnished a funny cartoonist with inspiration sufficient to last a month. Some tried to laugh and

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

Yes, August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers and grandmothers never thought of using anything else for indigestion or biliousness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of appendicitis, nervous prostration or heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and othaches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to moke you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. For sale by Grissom & Fordham.

WINE OF CARDUI

How a Woman Suffers.

HOWELL, IND., Nov. 26.
I will always praise Wine of Cardui. It has done me more good than all the medicines I have ever taken in my life. Please send a book about female diseases to the ladies whose names I enclose.
Mrs. MINNIE STODGHILL.

McELREE'S
Wine of Cardui

It isn't necessary for a woman to give particulars. When she says she has "female troubles", other women know what that means. It means days and nights of endless suffering. It means headaches which no tongue can describe. It means that terrible bearing and dragging down in the lower abdomen. It means agonizing backache, and shoulder ache, and arm ache, and aches in the lower limbs. It means nerves on edge—the blues— despondency and loss of hope. It means debilitating drains that the doctors call leucorrhœa. It means martyrdom—sometimes even death seems preferable. And still Wine of Cardui will utterly put those diseases and pains to rout. It has cured thousands of cases when nothing else on earth would. To the budding woman, to the bride, to the wife, to the expectant mother, to those going through the Change of Life, this Vegetable Wine is a blessing.

Such thoughtful appreciation of the demands of journalism was sure to raise in behalf of the accused a powerful influence not to be ignored.—Indianapolis Press.

Envious Admiration.

When Mandy gits a little riled I listen by the hour,
Is steady admiration of her oratoric power.
Ef I'd her gift of language, lofty heights
I'd surely reach,
Cause I wouldn't git stage-frightened every time I made a speech.

TATTERS WAS JEALOUS.

Deeply Offended Because His Mistress Took Affectionate Leave of Another Horse in the Stable.

In a boarding stable in New York there is a horse whose name is Tatters. He is the pet of Mrs. D——, who owns and drives him. She always gives him an apple or carrot before starting on a drive and another on returning, the latter being given after the bridle has been removed; and he has learned to wait patiently for the dainty until that time.

On the same floor of the stable is Mr. B——'s horse, Phil. Mrs. D—— used frequently to give an apple to Phil, after giving one to Tatters. The latter would manifest displeasure at this in a mild way, but his demonstrations never went beyond the shaking of his head and laying back of his ears.

But one evening while Tatters, who had just come in, was waiting for the removal of his bridle, Phil, who was ahead of him, was the recipient of an apple from Mrs. D——'s hand as she stood talking to Mr. B——.

A moment later the groom had removed Tatters' bridle, and at once his mistress offered him his apple. He turned his head away and refused to touch the fruit. Mrs. D—— followed him into his stall and tried to coax him, but he began munching his hay and would not look at her.

Then Mr. B——, and after him the groom, tried to induce Tatters to take the apple, but to no purpose; he was hurt because his mistress had given an apple to Phil before giving one to him, and he would not forgive the affront.

His owner's feelings were much like those of the horse, and she left the stable with tears in her eyes. Before starting out the next day she had a friend give a carrot instead of an apple to Tatters, in the hope that if he had forgotten the unintended affront the carrot might break the association with the apple.

He took the carrot eagerly. Then he took one from his mistress' hand, and you may be sure she has never since then given apple or carrot to another horse while Tatters was in sight.—N. Y. Observer.

Ice Blazes in Kansas.

When Doniphan lake, in Kansas, is covered with ice the boys and girls can make a blaze at any time by making a hole in the ice and holding a lighted match to the opening. Instantly a jet of flame will leap up several feet in the air and will burn brightly for some minutes. This is because large quantities of natural gas bubble up from the bed of the lake and are held under the surface of the ice. In some parts of the lake the gas supply is so great that it prevents ice from forming except in the coldest weather. It is not an uncommon practice for skaters on the lake to make a small hole in the ice, light the gas and warm their fingers at the blaze, which in exceptional cases will continue to flicker for hours.

Happy Outcome.

Gilfoyle—Kilduff's elopement wasn't successful, was it?

Poindexter—O, I don't know. The old man caught them before they reached the minister's.—The Smart Set.

As to the Bird.

"You call your parrot 'Money,' I see. Money talks."

"Not at all. Don't tell anyone, but I call him that because nobody about the house can make him fly as well as my wife can."—Chicago Tribune.

Heredity.

"I don't care much about the circus," said the boy. "I only go to give father an excuse for going."

This terrible falsehood illustrates the influence of heredity.—Detroit Journal.

ADS SAVE TIME

A city postmaster says that people out of town use him as an information bureau, asking for what should be, but is not, in the advertising columns of the newspapers. One man wrote that he needed a patent lawyer, but could find no ad of one. He wrote to several lawyers whose names he had learned, but they were not in that line. From a friend in town he got the name of a firm that was in the city directory, but when he wrote it had gone out of business. There were at least a dozen patent solicitors in the city, yet because they did not advertise he lost his time and was put to much trouble.
